By fate, fluke and mis-fortune - but mostly through the lottery of birth -
I have the following information to share: the EXACT origin of 9/11.

Where to begin? The middle seems a good place...

9/11, Al Qaeda, The Deep State and Me

by Anthony C Heaford

Introduction

On Wednesday 24 September 1997 - in a large, secure compound occupying a defensive hill top in Taiz city, Yemen [13.586, 44.033], just seventeen miles south of Al Qa'idah town [13.76, 44.14] - Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's terror cell initiated the 9/11 plot. That happened two days after a visiting service technician had first spoken to them of the danger of a civilian airliner departing Boston's Logan airport being hijacked and used as a missile to strike the World Trade Centre in New York.

I was that service technician, an unwitting patsy of a CIA linked, ex-special forces operator. That operator was my employer's US salesman, Dave Dean of Dean Printing Systems in Chicago.

During a six day business trip to Yemen in Sept 1997 the customer's chemistry graduate Pakistani employees asked me about visiting New York as tourists, and specifically about visiting the World Trade Centre. I warned them, saying:

"The same group that tried to blow-up the World Trade Centre in 1993 will try again, but next time they'll use a hijacked civilian airliner departing Logan airport as a missile."

The customer was a multi-billion dollar global conglomerate, the Hayel Saeed Anam Group at PO Box 5302 Taiz. After confirming my travel warning the managing director Saeed Alrobaidi arranged three meetings for me. First I was vetted by Yousef before being introduced to "the Engineer" (Khalid Sheikh Mohammed) the next morning, just before being taken to a meeting one mile from Al Qa'idah town. My employer was a British engineering company with an ex-US Special Forces, MACVSOG trained, CIA linked (via Billy Waugh) US salesman, Dave Dean.

Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ahmed al-Darbi

I think Yousef is the brother or cousin of Ramzi bin al-Shibh; the Yemeni national described as a principle architect of 9/11

I have no doubt that the man introduced to me as 'the Engineer' is Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, and that 'Dino' is Ahmed al-Darbi

In November 1996 my Father had asked me to rejoin his company as a field service technician; I'd served a mechanical fitter's apprenticeship there from 1988-1993. British Petroleum (BP) PLC's aircraft refuelling division (who I was agency sub-contracted to at Manchester airport) countered by offering me a full BP contract - a permanent staff job with the oil giant. My Father asserted he could offer me better job security (being family) and I began working for him in January 1997. My Father retired and his account brother became managing director. I was made redundant in April 1998.

But in April 1997 I was demonstrating printing machinery at an international trade show held in north America's largest exhibition centre, McCormick Place in Chicago. Visitors to our stand included 9/11 terrorist Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's financiers, and the very next day by the British Counsel to Washington (or some similar senior post). And by September 1997 I was:

- helping set-up a terrorist cell's front company in Yemen ·
- introduced to wanted terrorist Khalid Sheikh Mohammed ·
- taken to a clandestine meeting one mile from Al Qa'idah town ·
- unwittingly used by my Father and his 'Deep State' associates ·

Dave Dean

Dean told me he was nineteen years old during the infamous battle for Hill 937 in Vietnam, so going off that he was born around 1950. He's mentioned by name in Samuel Zaffiri's book Hamburger Hill for an outstanding act of courage, humanity, reckless bravery and professionalism at the height of that most horrific of battles. Dean spoke little of his military service but he did tell me the following in 1988 when driving between an industry exhibition in Birmingham England, and Manchester airport:

- His military career ended quickly, after 'breaking nearly every bone in my body' during a parachute training accident in Vietnam.
- Dean said his parachute had become entangled with the jungle canopy they were deliberately landing in, and he'd been swung like a pendulum into a heavysset rainforest tree trunk.
- I confirmed that the accident was 'in-country' because such training in a conflict zone is unusual. Dean confirmed his parachuting accident was in Vietnam.
- After recovering in the Philippines he medically discharged and remained there for the rest of the war. Dean said he ran a go-go bar besides Clark air base in Angeles town, one frequented by US service personnel. The CIA used Clark air base in the 1970s for clandestine Air America activity and to train foreign guerrillas forces such as the Hmong tribesmen of the Vietnamese highlands.

The only such parachute training - in-country / jungle landing - at that time was run by a top secret special forces unit called Military Assistance Command Vietnam - Studies and Observations Group (MACV SOG). Using the High Altitude Low Opening (HALO) parachuting technique to insert small special forces units into North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia was the brainchild of Sergeant Billy Waugh, a Korean war veteran and special forces specialist. The project was a failure, with missions often suffering 100% casualty rates. A North Vietnamese spy in the MACV SOG HQ was eventually uncovered - they'd been relaying US landing zone coordinates to the North Vietnamese forces. MACV SOG was disbanded in 1972 and Sergeant Billy Waugh medically discharged too. Waugh became a US Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) contractor, something that gave him indemnity in the 1970s for his involvement in the training of Libyan special forces and the supply of twenty tonnes of C-4 plastic explosives to Colonel Gaddafi. His associate in that matter, Edwin P. Wilson, was not contracting for the CIA at the time and he was imprisoned for decades.

In a 2004 autobiography Billy Waugh admits training Al Qaeda fighters, sometime in 1990s Yemen:

1989-2001: CIA Contractor Trains Al-Qaeda and Related Organizations

CIA contractor Billy Waugh trains various al-Qaeda operatives around the globe, possibly for more than a decade. In his 2004 autobiography he will write, "I worked right there with these al-Qaeda operatives and heard these arguments [about the badness of US policy] firsthand many times, especially during an assignment in Yemen." This training must take place between 1989, when he is hired by the CIA, and 2001, when he begins his last assignment for the agency in Afghanistan. The reference to Yemen may indicate that Waugh worked there during the 1994 civil war, when the US supported the religiously-oriented North Yemen against the breakaway south (see May 21-July 7, 1994).

During our week together in 1988 Birmingham Dean told me he was my Father's new US salesman, and new to the printing industry but familiar with electronics and the [explosive] chemicals used in printing. I noticed a curiosity about Dean that lasted our entire acquaintanceship: he never allowed his photo to be taken. This fact - Dean ducking to tie his shoelace at the appropriate photo moments - clearly amused the senior international service technician David Hughes, but he never actually said anything. Hughes did tease Dean in the evenings over a drink, asking him to tell us about his military service (which Dean wouldn't), or goading him to recite every King and Queen of England for us - their names, history and politics being something Dean had reputedly set to memory.

One time, on mine and my Father's arrival in the USA, Dean met us at the airport with his young girlfriend who drove us in her Saab convertible sports car to a bar she and Dean ran together. It was called the Skybox, a sparsely furnished, windowless first floor unit of a factory building inside the cargo handling area of Chicago's O'Hare international airport. That setup made me think of the 1970s go-go bar besides Clark air base in the Philippines that Dean said was frequented by US air crews.

Another time Dean told me he could've got me out of some legal trouble I'd had in 1994 Manila. While on holiday I'd been arrested for carrying less than one gram of cannabis; I settled the matter through negotiation, but my passport was lost in the process. Dean told me he could've resolved the matter through his still high level, high influence contacts in the Philippines. Abu Sayyaf terrorist group (named after a Saudi sponsored, NATO backed, Wahhabi Afghan Warlord) had been active in the Philippines since 1989. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed was in Manila in 1994 too, planning airline bombings with his nephew Ramzi Yousef. KSM and Yousef were trained/employed/mentored by that same Saudi sponsored, NATO backed, Wahhabi Afghan Warlord - Abdul Rasul Sayyaf to whom we will return to in October 2001, when the CIA visited him and paid him a substantial cash dollar retainer.

My brother Paul Heaford lived in the USA in the 1990s, working directly for Dave Dean rather than my Father. It was Paul who installed the first machine sold to the multi-billion dollar global conglomerate I now know to have been 9/11 terrorist Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's financiers. Paul travelled to Yemen in 1993 to install a gravure proofing press in a factory I think likely to have been an Al Qaeda front company. That assertion is based on my experiences installing another machine for this customer in 1997 Yemen, and this statement by the former US Ambassador to Yemen, Barbara Bodine:

“When I got there in 1997 there was already an Al Qaeda presence. We knew about it. The Yemenis knew about it. Everyone knew about it. One of the best ways to describe the presence is that they were largely warehousing lower-level [foreign national] people in peripheral areas.”

Summary: I believe Dave Dean is a Deep State operative. After medically discharging from the highly secretive MACV-SOG Special Forces the same time as Billy Waugh (1972), I think they continued to work together. Whether Dean ever became a CIA employee, or just a sub-contractor to a CIA contractor like Billy Waugh, I'm not sure. I do believe my employer's 1993 and 1997 machine sales to Yemen were related to Al Qaeda's presence there. Those CIA trained Al Qaeda fighters fought on the US allied Yemeni government's side in the 1994 civil war, fighting against the Saudi, United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Oman and Kuwait backed southern separatists. I suspect the 1993 machine installation in the frontline city of Taiz was just to provide a front company for the Al Qaeda presence there that Barbara Bodine described as:

“... warehousing lower-level [foreign nationals] in peripheral areas.”

I know without any shadow of a doubt that my employer's 1997 machine sale to the frontline city of Taiz was to provide a front company for an international terrorist organisation. I know because I was the technician sent to Yemen in 1997; the technician taken to 'the Base' one mile from Al Qa'idah town; the technician who met the terrorist there too - this time it was Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. He was wanted for his part in the February 1993 World Trade Center bomb attack but had fled his sanctuary in Qatar in 1996, after their authorities came under pressure from US Intel agencies.

John Marland Heaford, My Father

How does a hard working, vegetable growing family man become involved with providing material support to international terrorists? Unwittingly, unwillingly and unintentionally would be my first replies, but I must also add, through the proverbial accident of birth. My Father was a professionally and personally accomplished man, respected by many and reward twice by the Queen. A qualified draughtsman, my Father was hard-working and talented, but benefited from nepotism too. He was made the acting managing director of his Uncle's (Dick Cunliffe, heir to the Cunliffe banking dynasty) engineering company in Manchester, GMS Ltd. But upon his Uncle's death he was replaced as managing director and stormed out of his engineering role there as a result. By 1982 he'd set up his own engineering firm - run from a cellar at home until he'd sold his first machine. He was building printing machinery for a global market, in direct competition to his former employers, the Cunliffes.

I suspect my Father's relationship with Dave Dean and the Deep State began in 1986, when he sold a money printing machine to the El Salvadorian government mint, a sale that help his company win a Queen's Award for Export Achievement in 1987. My reasoning is the El Salvadorian government of the 1980s was a brutal, rightwing, CIA backed junta. In 1986 my Father drove to collect me from boarding school in Lancaster. I was sixteen and had been on my latest army cadet summer camp, two weeks in Germany. I think he was impressed by my endeavours and he proceeded to tell me about his recent trip to central America. He said that after arriving in San Salvador, with a government driver taking him to the nation's money printing facilities, they'd driven past a freshly executed young man lying on the pavement. When I asked him how he knew he'd been executed my Dad described seeing fresh blood seeping on to the pavement from a head wound.

People familiar with CIA covert operations have since informed me that such intimidation tactics are a known procedure when recruiting 'Intelligence assets', as was the Italian honey trap / blackmail plot my Dad was subjected to in the early 1990s, a sting very likely setup by Dave Dean.

There are countless reasons why someone like Dean will have chosen someone like my Dad - a frequent flying business owner supplying the varied print industry (from money and magazines to food packaging and plastic bags) are reason enough. But that targeted recruitment could have come other ways too. He'd sold and installed the exact same type of machinery as El Salvador's government mint's, to the US government's mint in 1970s Washington. Another possible avenue could've been his two accountant brothers:

- One brother worked in 1980s Switzerland. In 1984 an agent of Abdul Rahman Hayel Saeed, a director of my Father's Yemeni customer, was using Mr Saeed's power of attorney to open a Swiss shell company to finance international terrorism. That agent was Ahmed Idris Nasruddin, a known terrorism financier identified by the US Treasury and United Nations in 2002, in the wake of 9/11
- The other brother lived and worked in 1970s/80s Nassau in the Bahamas, just when Britain was transitioning from physical Empire to a series of offshore financial piracy jurisdictions. Again Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's financiers - my Father's Yemeni customer - also used a shell company in the British Caribbean (the Cayman Islands tax haven), at exactly the same time as they were hosting Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's terrorist cell in their headquarter's compound in Taiz city, Yemen

Either brother could've / should have been aware of the secretive global economy awash with dirty money scams, from cleaning drug lord's billions to routing funds to varied global insurgencies. Both men are well placed socially, via schools and their careers to have contacts in British security services too, and equally likely to have contacts with the Generals running juntas or the business men running cocaine. The infamous cocaine transit island Norman's Cay is only 38 nautical miles from Nassau.

My parents have their own connections to 'secret societies' too - from the Freemasons up. My Mother's family were active Freemasons, and my paternal Grandfather was a member of a 'smaller club' called the White Shield (their connections helped both my Grandfathers avoid war-time conscription for example). My Grandfather was a personal accountant to his brother-in-law the banking heir Dick Cunliffe (my Dad's Uncle) and to the Cunliffe Group. The White Shield club consisted his most influential friends, some industrialists of old and a former diplomat I think.

9/11, Al Qaeda, The Deep State and Me

by Anthony C Heaford

The White Shield club meet once a month and on a Saturday morning as I recall, rotating venue between their homes. Although membership is not hereditary, my Father began attending and hosting the White Shield meetings too.

I've no idea what the members of the White Shield club spoke of, and my Grandfathers were both the most noble of characters. But unfortunately I've been put in a situation where I'm fighting for my life against the most devious of forces - the Deep State - and putting these details in the open matters. As a whistleblower on the Deep State's links to KSM's financiers, it is a life-or-death situation for me.

My Father passed away in March 2022 and so it's likely we'll ever be sure of his route into the Deep State, but I'm pretty certain his relationship with CIA sub-contractor Dave Dean began in 1986 El Salvador. I know for a fact Dean was integrating himself into the printing industry by 1988 (at the Birmingham trade show where I first got to know him) and noticed my Father's stress levels increased even further from around that time. He later told me some Americans' refused to deal with Dave Dean because of his military background; I asked if it was because he'd volunteered for Vietnam and my Dad vaguely replied - without looking me in the eye - 'Something like that'.

I was given some odd tasks when first employed by my Father, such as:

- photographing his ex-business partner's car and home. He'd opened his own engineering firm in USSR occupied Hungary after falling out with my Father
- delivering cash stuffed envelopes to fashion boutique shops in central London

But there was nothing to suggest to me that he was anything other than a determined business man.

It took me eighteen years to realise 'the Engineer' I was introduced to in 1997 Yemen was in fact 9/11 terrorist Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. That happened in April 2015. It was another four years (November 2019) before I discovered Dave Dean's links to CIA contractor Billy Waugh, via their shared 1970s Vietnam service with MACV-SOG. And it wasn't until 2020 until I finally realised the full extent of my Father's role in my meetings with KSM's financiers and associates.

My Father had retired six months after I'd rejoined the company. He arranged my 20-26 September 1997 business trip to Yemen from retirement at home, and on short notice. The first technician asked to go had refused to travel there due to the government advising not to, warning of the risk of terrorism and kidnapping. So my trip was setup from my parent's home (they were both directors of the business they started and managed together), as that's where they first asked me to go to Yemen and where they received the telephone call from Yemen giving an absolute assurance of my safety whilst there.

In retrospect I think that phone call will have come via Dave Dean and could have been from the President of Yemen's own brother-in-law, General Ali Mohsen. General Mohsen was a friend of Osama bin Laden, recruiting fighters for the 1980s Afghan Mujahideen cause and even travelling to Afghanistan and meeting with bin Laden there. It's widely reported that bin Laden gave General Mohsen $20-million to fund the resettlement of Arab Mujahideen forces in 1980s Yemen, after they'd finished defeated the Soviet Union's occupation of Afghanistan. A second candidate for that guarantor of my safety was the Director of Security for Taiz province, Rashad al-Alimi, appointed in 1996. Today (July 2022), Rashad al-Alimi is the Saudi backed Chairman of the [Yemen] Presidential Leadership Council.

My principle reason for claiming such high level safety assurances is a scheduled international flight being delayed solely for me on my last day in Yemen, as detailed later in this report. Until 2021 General Ali Mohsen was the Saudi backed Vice President of Yemen in exile, and an enemy of the Ansarullah / Houthi forces that are defending Yemen from the Saudi / US / UK / UAE coalition attacks.

And so it turns out my Father was a player, a Deep State agent acting at the highest levels on the international stage. And I was his patsy; or maybe I just missed my invitation into the Deep State. He received a second Queen's Award for Export Achievement in 1995, after his 1993 sale to Yemen.

HSA - the Hayel Saeed Anam - Group

April 1997, my introduction to KSM's financiers in Chicago, USA: Executives from a London based company called Longulf Trading (the London office of the multi-billion dollar Hayel Saeed Anam Group global conglomerate) went on a remarkable shopping spree at the Converting Machinery Manufacturer's international trade show being held in Chicago's McCormick Place exhibition centre. The Longulf Trading executives ordered about $3-million worth of top-end graphics, printing and packaging equipment in total, all for an ill-defined end-customer in Yemen whose company name they made-up on the spot, with no delivery address either.

I was demonstrating a machine on my employer's exhibition stand when the Longulf executives enquired about purchasing one. Within half-an-hour I'd shown them the practical bits and the salesmen were holding a signed contract for $100,000; Longulf paid list price without negotiating, and proposed full payment would be made upfront. The Longulf executives said the end customer was in Yemen, but they were very vague about the end-customer's name. First they said it was GenPak but after being told GenPak was an existing multi-national company they changed it to GemPak. When installing the machine in September 1997 I was told the company name was YemPak – short for Yemen-Pakistan. No delivery address or machine specifications were given in Chicago and one salesman (Jerry Stephens, a British military veteran of counter piracy operations in the South China Sea) immediately referred to the sale as suspicious. The second salesman, my brother Nigel Heaford, responded by saying:

"Don't ask any questions, they just paid list price for our top machine."

Although present at the exhibition my Dad and Dave Dean were away from our exhibition stand for the duration of the Longulf executives' visit, watching from a cafe overlooking the exhibition hall it later transpired. Dean had pulled my Father away from the stand about twenty minutes before the Longulf executives arrived.

Upon Dean & my Father's return, shortly after the Longulf Trading executives had left, my father didn't appear surprised by the $100,000 sale we'd made during their absence. Very unusually Dean also declined the sales commission of several thousand dollars too. He was entitled to it for the machine sale on his territory - so I assume this was a deliberate effort by Dean to avoid any documented link between Longulf Trading or their parent company the Hayel Saeed Anam Group.

But even in 1997 there were already documented links between the US embassy in Yemen and Longulf Trading's parent company, the Hayel Saeed Anam (HSA) Group. Twice in August 1996 the US embassy in Yemen published 'Export Opportunities' requests, offering overseas business leads to US companies. Two of those 'export opportunities' was to supply industrial quantities of multiple chemicals - including almost every ingredient needed to make TNT explosives - to the HSA Group headquarters (HQ) in Taiz Yemen, but ultimately destined for unnamed third-parties!

THE BRITISH-YEMENI SOCIETY

Est. in 1993, the British-Yemeni Society is a Deep State front

It connects billionaire financiers of international terrorism to the very highest echelons of the British Establishment.

Members include:

- Dr Noel Brehony CMG - former British diplomat
- Dr Robert Wilson OBE - Cambridge, ex-Foreign Office
- Julian Lush - Cambridge, ex-Shell Oil Rep
- ... and...

Dirhem Abdo Saeed - an honorary Vice-President. The US university educated Yemeni is also Vice Chairman of his family owned global conglomerate, the Hayel Saeed Anam Group. He's managing director of their London office Longulf Trading, an executive of the Tadhamon International Islamic bank and a director of a Cayman Islands shell company called Atlantic Investments. He's also a director of Cepac, Britain's largest cardboard printing manufacturer, est. May 1997.

I can link EVERY SINGLE appointment of Dirhem Abdo Saeed's to international terrorism financing

9/11, Al Qaeda, The Deep State and Me

by Anthony C Heaford

The HSA Group contact name given by the US embassy in August 1996 was the general manager Mohamed A. Salem. On 26 September 1997 the HSA Group HQ general manager Mohamed drove me to a clandestine meeting one mile from Al Qa'idah town, thirty minutes after we'd both had our photos taken with Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. At least two of the Pakistani employees Mohamed managed inside the HSA Group HQ compound (the two I worked with) were chemistry graduates.

Is it possible that the US embassy's 1996 contact Mohamed A. Salem is the same Mohamed I met in 1997? That'd mean it is possible that the Pakistani chemistry graduates I spent a week with inside the HSA Group HQ were using those US sourced chemicals to manufacture the TNT explosives that were used in the August 1998 US embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania.

The screenshot shows a JOC.COM advertisement for 'EXPORT OPPORTUNITIES' dated August 6, 1996. The ad includes contact information for Mohamed A. Salem, General Manager of Hayel Saeed Anam & Co., P.O. Box 5302, Taiz, Republic of Yemen. Annotations in yellow text boxes highlight 'PO Box 5302 - the same address as YemPak (Yemen/Pakistan abbreviation, an al Qaeda front company used by 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed)' and 'The US embassy supplied explosive chemicals to this al Qaeda front location'. A blue arrow points from the top box to the contact information, and a black arrow points from the bottom box to the same information. The ad also includes a request to send a response to the Commercial Section of the American Embassy in Sanaa, D.C., with a reference to P0004.

With this distinct possibility - a US embassy supplying the explosive chemicals used to bomb other US embassies - it must be clarified if Mohamed A. Salem is the Mohamed who took me to 'the Base' by Al Qa'idah town and was in my photos with KSM. And who, if anyone, supplied the chemicals to the HSA Group HQ. It is of note here to say Dave Dean's 'Dean Printing Systems' company lists supplying chemicals as one of their specialities.

That 'export opportunity' of explosive chemicals to 1996 Yemen, destined for unnamed end users via the HSA Group, must also be viewed in light of former US ambassador Barbara Bodine saying:

"When I got there in 1997 there was already an Al Qaeda presence. We knew about it. The Yemenis knew about it. Everyone knew about it. ... warehousing lower level foreign nationals in peripheral areas."

The 'foreign nationals' Bodine refers to were the Pakistani and Saudi factory workers I met and trained over five days in 1997 Yemen. The 'warehousing' & 'peripheral areas' she spoke of were the YemPak factory building in the HSA Group HQ compound, and I'd guess HSA's extensive industrial estates across Yemen and the world too. But I don't think the people operating from the HSA Group HQ were 'low level'. I think I was amongst a group of their most senior and talented people. 'the Engineer' Khalid Sheikh Mohammed was there, as was mechanic Ahmed al-Darbi, a Saudi national and former Guantanamo detainee.

by Anthony C Heaford

When training the two Pakistani employees (chemistry graduates) I remember asking their trade / profession, then saying they were over qualified for the machine operator work I was showing them.

And they all called the HSA Group HQ managing director Saeed Alrobaidi 'the Chief'. It was 'the Chief' Saeed Alrobaidi who introduced me to Khalid Sheikh Mohammed (KSM). He arranged a dinner meeting for me too, my vetting before meeting KSM I've since realised. And the Chief's general manager Mohamed took me to my clandestine meeting. Mr Alrobaidi was vague about his nationality but settled on saying Omani. If that's correct, then an alliance with KSM would make sense from a historical point of view.

A legacy of the British Empire in the region, the port city of Gwadar in Baluchistan, Pakistan had been Omani territory until 1958 and Balochi mercenaries formed a substantial part of the British backed Sultan of Oman's Army. During the 1963 to 1978 Dhofar rebellion in Oman, their Sultan actively sought to hire more Balochi mercenaries. Khalid Sheikh Mohammed is of Balochi heritage and significantly I read that two of his Uncles were killed during the 1970s Balochi insurgency in Pakistan. That's one possible historical connection between KSM and the Hayel Saeed Anam Group.

Another connection could be the HSA Group's documented links to international terrorism financing dating back to 1982, a connection highlighted by the US Treasury and United Nations in the wake of the 9/11 attacks. In August 2002 former Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill described Ahmed Idris Nasreddin as a "supporter of terrorism" involved in "an extensive financial network providing support to Al Qaeda and other terrorist-related organisations." Eritrean national Nasreddin was the founder of the NASCO group of companies (headquartered in Nigeria, net worth $1.2-billion) and in 1982 was a close business partner of HSA Group director Abdul Rahman Hayel Saeed (ARHS). That relationship in 1982 was strong enough for ARHS to give Nasreddin his power of attorney - legal authority to sign documents on his behalf. Nasreddin used that power of attorney to establish a Swiss financial shell company (already mentioned on page 5 in relation to my Father's accountant brother) called MIGA. Former U.S. Assistant Treasury Secretary Juan Zarate described MIGA as "a very good example of an investment company that is used as a shell to hide and move money." Shortly after 9/11 both MIGA and Nasreddin were added to the United Nations (UN) watchlist of entities and individuals belonging to, or affiliated with Al Qaeda.

9/11, Al Qaeda, The Deep State and Me

by Anthony C Heaford

Ahmed Idris Nasreddin was removed from the UN terrorist watchlist in 2007. Nasreddin was NOT cleared of having financed terrorism, he simply promised 'not to do it again'. HSA Group's director ARHS explained away his relationship with Nasreddin by saying that they fell-out around 1984; that he did not know of the Swiss shell company MIGA's existence; and he'd 'forgot' about giving Nasreddin his power of attorney.

"When is a terrorism figure no longer one?" - Los Angeles Times

The first Fox News report naming the HSA Group also highlights the following 'coincidences':

"Within that HSA empire, one company in particular stands out: A trading house called Pacific Interlink, based in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. Abdul Rahman Hayel Saeed also sits on Pacific Interlink's board of directors."

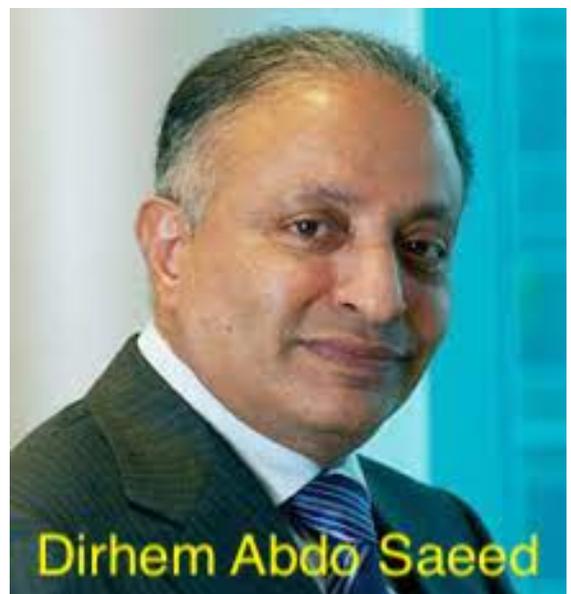

"Both HSA's and MIGA's offices overlap in locations that are hubs of normal commerce, but also served as hotspots of Al Qaeda meetings and finance, such as Dubai (where Hayel Saeed reportedly ran an HSA company, Frimex, in the late 1990s) or Kuala Lumpur (where some of the Sept. 11 hijackers gathered for a planning conference in January 2000). Pacific Interlink boasts offices or agents in places thick with terror networks, such as Algeria, Sudan, and Syria. MIGA, on its Lugano sign, lists offices in places such as Italy, Turkey, Syria, Nigeria and Kuwait, and both HSA and MIGA list offices in Morocco, Malaysia and Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, where Hayel Saeed is now based."

The HSA Group subsidiary Pacific Interlink was founded in 1988, the same year the group now known as 'Al Qaeda' was established during an August 1988 meeting in Peshawar, Pakistan. Meanwhile Nasreddin's company NASCO operates across Africa, with a corporate footprint that matches the Al Shebab terrorist entity's almost exactly. Is it possible that NASCO & the HSA Group are the legitimate business fronts behind a global terror network? If that were the case it'd raise many questions about Nasreddin & ARHS both being 'let off' by both the UN and the US Treasury for their links to financing terrorism."

Looking at another HSA Group director, Dirhem Abdo Saeed (DAS), reveals the global conglomerate's intimate links to the British Empire of old and the British Establishment of today.

DAS is a vice chairman of the terrorist hosting HSA Group, is managing director of the terrorism supporting Longulf Trading and remarkably is an honorary Vice President of the London based British-Yemeni Society.

The British-Yemeni Society was founded in 1993, the same year my Father sold his first proofing press machine to the HSA Group. DAS has some other very remarkable appointments too, all of which tie him intimately to the British Establishment.

Two other HSA Group family members became directors at the same time, one using the address of both the HSA Group headquarters in Taiz, Yemen and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's 'YemPak' front company - PO Box 5302.

In April 1997 executives of DAS's company Longulf Trading were in Chicago - where I met them - buying the printing machinery for KSM's YemPak front company that I installed in September 1997.

And in May 1997 DAS registered a new company called Cepac Limited which purchased and amalgamated three separate companies to create Britain's biggest cardboard packaging company.

DAS is also an executive of the Tadhamon International Islamic Bank which is known to have provided banking services in areas controlled by the Daesh terrorist entity.

The HSA Group was established in British Aden in 1938, one year after the strategic Arabian port had become an official British Crown colony. The HSA Group left Aden shortly after the British left too, their founding patriarch claiming that they were “forced out by the communist party [anti-colonial Arab nationalists] that confiscated his entire business and assets in Aden.”.

Looking at the HSA Group’s history it appears they foresaw the change of fortunes in Aden and had protected themselves by establishing a new shipping business based in Al Hodeidah port in 1962. Called the Middle East Shipping Company Limited it was out of reach of the anti-colonial Arab nationalists in Aden. British forces finally departed Aden in 1967 and by 1969 the HSA Group had established a new headquarters in the city of Taiz, seventeen miles south of Al Qa’idah town. It’s the same headquarters I visited in 1997 and where they hosted Khalid Sheikh Mohammed’s terrorist cell.

It is worth noting that the 1938 establishment of the HSA Group coincided with an American company's discovery of the world's largest known oil field (to this day) in Saudi controlled Arabia. HSA's 1962 creation of Yemen's first international shipping company also coincided with the Saudis creating the Muslim World League (MWL) - an institution used to spread their Wahhabi interpretation of Islam around the world. In 1967 the Belgium King gifted the MWL a ninety-nine year lease on a building in the heart of Brussels and it was converted to a place of worship called The Grand Mosque. Following the 2016 terrorist bombings in Brussels links between The Grand Mosque, radical Wahhabism and terrorist attacks in Europe were confirmed, the Saudis gave up their control of the building in 2018.

By 2004 the HSA Group had moved its headquarters from Taiz, Yemen to Jeddah in Saudi controlled Arabia. Today the HSA Group is based in the United Arab Emirate (UAE) Dubai.

As well as being a major logistics hub for the 9/11 attackers during their preparations, Dubai and the UAE have a long historical links to Wahhabi extremism. In the 1600s the area known today as the UAE was known as 'The Pirate Coast'. By 1805 Wahhabis dominated the area and implemented a system of organised raids on foreign shipping from their bases on the Pirate Coast.

In 1819, determined to put an end to the Wahhabi pirates' attacks on their shipping, the British navy responded. They sent a naval force with three-thousands soldiers with an additional six-hundred soldiers supplied by the Sultan of Muscat (in Oman). Their main target, the pirate town of Ras Al Khaimah, was destroyed within days by artillery fire. Today Ras Al Khaimah is one of UAE's seven Emirates and the pirate dynasty of 1819, Al Qasimi, remains in power.

The British force destroyed most of the pirate ships and the Wahhabi pirate's inland holdout was bombarded with artillery until total victory was achieved.

Britain's total victory led to an 1820 treaty, from when the Pirate Coast was renamed the Trucial States. The treaty was part of the Britain's strategic policy of maintaining dominance over trade routes to British controlled India by excluding rival European powers from the Persian Gulf region, notably Russia and France.

The UAE (the 9/11 attacker's logistic base), Oman (the claimed nationality of KSM's terrorist cell's Chief, Saeed Alrobaidi) and Aden (the original base of KSM's financiers, the HSA Group) remained under effective British control for the next one-hundred and forty years.

These are my two customer database entries for YemPak. I completed the first before my visit to Yemen, based on information given to me by my works manager Tony Preece. The second entry I compiled whilst on site in Yemen, using information given to me by the customer's employees:

Genpak / Gempak - the fake company name given by the Longulf Trading executives during the machine purchase in April 1997 Chicago
Company: Genpak
Country: Yemen
Address: Sa'ana	The only location information the customer would provide Contacts: 9/97 Service
Ahmed Alrobaidi	Contact name collected in 1993 or possibly in Chicago 1997
Machinery: 3392 Gravure PP	The s/n of our machine installed in 1993
Company: Yempak ← Khalid Sheikh Mohammed's correct front company name, an abbreviation of Yemen/Pakistan
Country: Yemen
Address: Saana
Contacts: 9/97 Install. Arranged R/Bak Sample & sale
Said Obadi ~ Chief	Managing director Saeed Alrobaidi (spelt wrong by me)
Mr Dino ~ Man	The 'maintenance man', Ahmed al-Darbi (ex-Guantanamo detainee)
Taiz ~ Shawki Alariki ~ 9674 216301	My emergency contact's details
Machinery: 70153 WW Viper	The s/n & model of the machine I installed
Equipment: Bielloni 6/8 col ~ install eng Nicolas
The name of a visiting Italian engineer I met on site at YemPak. Nicolas raised suspicions about this customer with me before he left site on 22 September

Of significance are the names of the contacts in each entry - Ahmed Alrobaidi from the 1993 installation, and the man I met in 1997, Saeed Alrobaidi, or 'The Chief' as everyone there called him.

I do not know whether 'Ahmed Alrobaidi' was the customer contact in 1993 or whether he was one of the Longulf Trading executives who purchased our machine in Chicago in April 1997.

Saeed Alrobaidi gave me his name on my last morning in Yemen when I was tired and already late for my return flight. When he pronounced 'Al-robaidi' for me I asked him if the 'Al' just meant 'the' which he said it did and in my ignorance I dropped 'Al' when transcribing his name in to my data base, hence the spelling error of 'Obadi' instead of 'Alrobaidi'. Interestingly, 'Ibadi' is the original 'sect' within Islam, predating both Sunni and Shia factions, both of which pay high regard to the Ibadis.

Ibadi is the dominant faction in Oman. I'm not sure whether there's any link between Obadi (as in my contact Alrobaidi) and the Ibadi sect, but the link to Oman and Saeed Alrobaidi's role as 'the Chief' of KSM's terror cell makes me think this is worthy of note and further investigation.

My First 9/11 Warning - 12 June 1997

I was travelling in the USA on business again in June 1997, installing printing machinery at various locations. On Tuesday 11 June I was flying from Logan airport Boston to Toronto, Canada. From exiting a taxi on a public road outside Logan airport, to arriving at the aircraft door, I'd not been through any security checks. Other than showing my credit card in exchange for my boarding pass there were literally no security checks - nothing, none, nada. I did pass a luggage X-ray machine and a full body metal detector but they were both unmanned and unplugged.

I stopped at the aircraft door and cautioned the crew-member checking boarding passes. I said there'd been no security checks whatsoever in the airport. She smiled and told me:

"Don't worry, that's normal"

Twenty minutes later, as the aircraft was climbing to its cruising altitude and I was sitting a few metres away from the unsecured cockpit door on a nearly empty 767 aircraft, I realised how easily it would be to smuggle weaponry aboard and take control of the aircraft. I remembered the 1994 Air France hijacking and the alleged plan to crash the plane in to the Eiffel Tower; the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Centre (WTC) was fresh in my memory too. I then thought of the WTC's proximity to Logan airport and in that moment I conceived with horror the opportunity for and likelihood of a 9/11 style attack.

The next morning I was attending a service visit at a customer in Toronto but I refused to start work until the Sunworthy Decorative factory manager, Bob Wilton, had given me an assurance that he'd pass on my airport security concerns and my details to Canadian security services with a sense of urgency. My urgent warning on 12 June 1997 was:

"I think the same terrorists who attacked the WTC in 1993 will try again, but next time they'll use a hijacked civilian airliner departing Logan airport as a kamikaze piloted missile."

Mr. Wilton later said he had passed my warning and my details to his contact, but there was no feedback. I was never contacted back either. No one appeared interested or to care.

The complete absence of any security whatsoever at Boston airport, especially for a flight on a large bodied jet on an international flight (to Canada), was so startling to me as to be remarkable. The air crew's "Don't worry that's normal" response to my remark was breath-taking as I realised none of the passenger on this flight had been through security. They could've had anything with them.

I did a risk assessment of worst possible scenarios and a terrorist suicide hijacking using an Uzi sized machine pistol came top. The unsecured and flimsy cockpit door gave me cause for concern too.

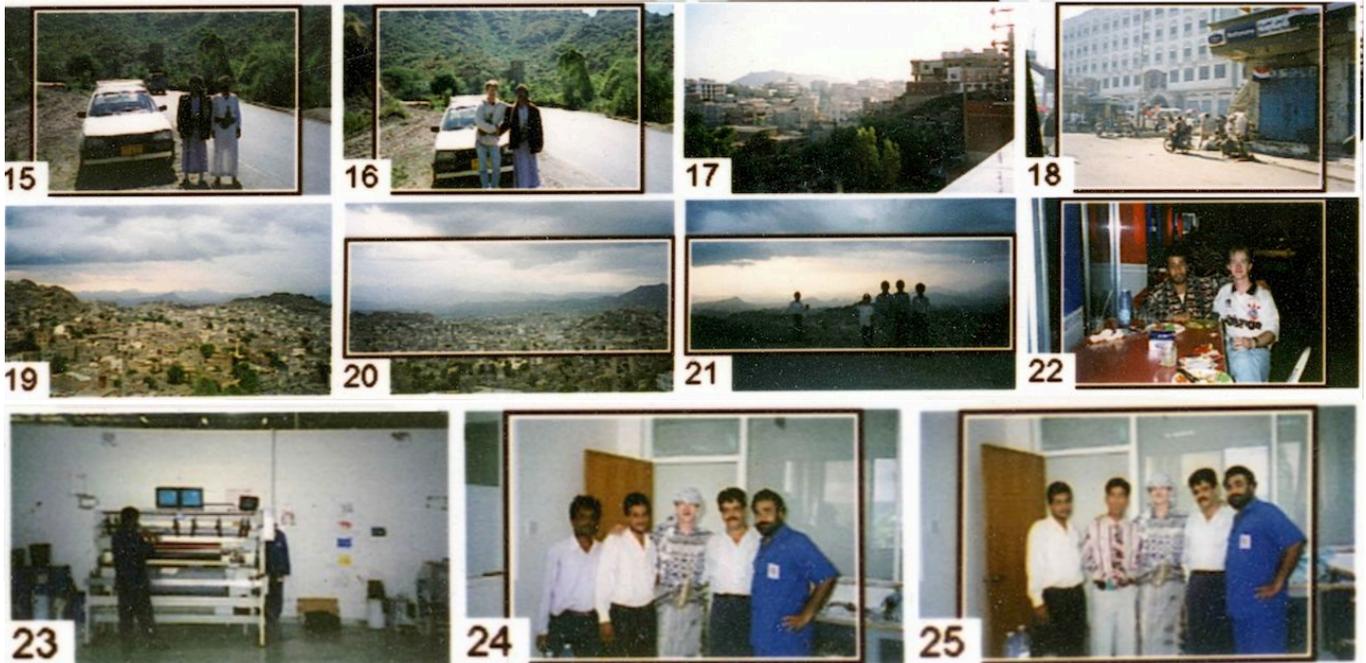

But I'd passed my warning to the first people I'd spoken to after my flight - two machine operators I was working with, and to someone in authority, Bob Wilton - the factory manager of that large and prestigious wallpaper printers in Toronto, Sunworthy Decorative. He'd confirmed he'd passed my warning and details on to his 'security' contact. Given that my employer's US salesman was a CIA connected ex-Special Forces operator I now wonder who exactly did Bob Wilton pass my aircraft hijacking warning to.

YemPak and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed

20—26 September 1997, my business trip to PO Box 5302 Taiz city, Yemen: 13.586, 44.033

Three months after my very specific warning of a terrorist attack on the World Trade Centre using a hijacked airliner departing Logan airport Boston (given in Toronto, to Bob Wilton and two other employees of Sunworthy Decorative printing) my Father asked me to travel to Yemen to install the machine sold at the April trade show in Chicago. Admittedly I wasn't his first choice – another service technician checked the British Foreign Office travel advice for Yemen and refused to go after seeing the high risk of kidnapping and terrorism there. My Mother, also a company director, insisted my Father seek some assurance for my safety before I travel there. I was present in their home when he received that reassurance in the form of a phone call from Yemen. He would not say who he'd spoken to but said with a broad smile that my safety was absolutely guaranteed.

Two days into my business trip to Yemen the Pakistani chemistry graduate I was training asked about my travels in the USA and specifically about visiting New York and the World Trade Centre. My response was very specific:

"Don't visit the World Trade Centre and take care whilst flying - I think the same terrorists who attacked the towers in 1993 will try again, but next time they'll use a hijacked civilian airliner as a missile."

We discussed my warning for a few minutes - I explained how I thought it could happen based on my experience at Logan airport in June. I said I could have carried a sub machine gun on board without detection. I don't recall an extended conversation about it; it was just a travel warning, one I'd given whenever the topic of travelling to the USA was raised.

The next day, Tuesday 23 September, the second machine operator I was training (another Pakistani chemistry graduate) asked me about my travel warning:

Q. What if the hijackers couldn't smuggle guns aboard?

A. I pointed to the box cutters in my tool wallet, highlighting their potential use as a weapon and saying I'd accidentally carried them on several internal US flights without being stopped

Q. Where would they put the bomb?

A. I said a fully fuelled 767 was the bomb
